Mike Samson Secures Republican Nomination for Garfield County Commissioner

RIFLE, CO - Incumbent Garfield County Commissioner Mike Samson secured the Republican nomination for District 3 in yesterday's primary election. Commissioner Samson ran unopposed. He will advance to the November general election, facing Democratic nominee Steven Arauza.

"I'm humbled by the trust that thousands of Garfield County voters have placed in me," said Commissioner Samson. "I want to thank my beautiful wife, Janet, as well as our volunteers, donors, and supporters. I appreciate every member of our community who believes in a prosperous Garfield County built on time-tested values and local control."

Samson, a longtime educator and public servant, has served as County Commissioner since 2009. His campaign emphasized his record of fiscal responsibility, support for local industries, and commitment to government that delivers its capabilities efficiently. He believes the general election campaign will focus on his proven track record and his vision for Garfield County's future. "I look forward to a robust debate about the best path forward for our community," Samson said. "Our local heritage deserves future growth that is organic, sustainable, and inclusive for our current residents and businesses. I think voters will appreciate my experience and commitment to organic, locally-driven economic development. With their help, we've had a long record of responsible public investment in infrastructure, safety, and services."

With the nomination in hand, Samson expressed confidence in the path to November. "When voters compare our records and visions for the future, I believe they'll choose to stay with steady, experienced leadership that has served our community well. Trusted values and real solutions are how we keep Garfield County, Garfield County, for everyone."
